

ABSTRACT

This is a web browser program similar to other web browsers except for one major difference: Users can access only selected (targeted) web sites. A user is required to log in to a central web site, which then returns to the browser a list of web sites that user may access. Any attempt to access a site not on the list fails. An online database that matches users to web sites is maintained through the use of a web browser by a person with administrator access.